Bellewood Acres

Our Story

John and Dorie Belisle grow 17, 000 apple trees on 23 acres of cropland in Lynden, Washington with great care for the environment.

John utilizes the latest technology to conserve water. A computer model is used to calculate irrigation needs from the information gathered by an on farm weather station.

Furthermore, John helped his neighbors remove old, diseased trees from their orchards which served to reduce pest and disease infestations in the region leading to overall reduction in pesticide use.

John and Dorie maintain a 150 ft. cover strip and riparian plantings adjacent to the creek running through the south edge of their property.
